The Alice F. Freed Prize in Language, Discourse, and Society

The "Alice F. Freed Prize in Language, Discourse, and Society" is an annual prize of $250 that recognizes one graduate student in Linguistics who completes the Master of Arts Degree Program in Applied Linguistics with outstanding work in the field of Sociolinguistics, Discourse Analysis, or Language and Culture. The prize will be awarded in May of each academic year. The full-time faculty of the Linguistics Department will select the recipient of the prize according to the following criteria:

- 1. The student's research for the capstone course APLN 605, Research Questions in Applied Linguistics (either Option A or Option B) falls within the domain of "Sociolinguistics," "Discourse Analysis," or "Language and Culture." The range of possible topics includes work on language change and variation; forensic linguistics (i.e., language and the law); language and gender; the analysis of ordinary, electronically-mediated or institutional discourse; narrative analysis; conversation analysis; critical discourse analysis; literacy; language planning and policy; and topics within the field of anthropological linguistics. Examples of past MA student research within these fields are listed at the bottom of this announcement.
- 2. In addition to the required courses for the MA in Applied Linguistics (which must include APLN 502 Sociolinguistics), the student completes at least one elective from the following list of courses and receives no less than an A- in the course:

APLN 510, Discourse Analysis

APLN 512, Cross-Cultural Discourse Analysis

APLN 518, Forensic Linguistics

APLN 530, Language Policy and Language Planning

APLN 532, Language and Culture

APLN 534, Languages in Contact

APLN 535, Language Policy in Nations in Transition

APLN 536, Languages of the U.S.A

APLN 538, Cross-cultural Perspectives on Language Socialization

APLN 540, Literacy

APLN 542, Cross-Cultural Perspectives on Literacy

APLN 582, Language and Mobile Communication

[Note: Courses and course titles often change over time. If new linguistics courses are developed in these specific areas of study, they may be added to the list of possible electives. All courses are to be taken in the Linguistics Department at Montclair State University or at the Linquistic Society of America's Summer Linquistic Institute.]

- 3. The student has an overall GPA of at least a 3.70 in courses leading to the MA in Applied Linguistics. In the case that a student is completing other courses toward the MA in Applied Linguistics in the same semester that the research for APLN 605 is being carried out, the student must have a 3.70 by the end of the preceding semester and must be in excellent standing in all remaining courses at the time that the application for this prize is submitted. See how to calculate your GPA at https://www.montclair.edu/advising-transitions/student-resources/gpa-calculator.php
- 4. To be considered for this prize, students may apply or be nominated by a full-time faculty member from the Linquistics Department. In either case, the student is responsible for turning in the application form (page 3 of this announcement) and submitting it to the Linguistics Department Office by April 1 of the academic year of graduation, whether for a January, May or August graduation.

Examples from past MA student research that fall within the scope of this prize are listed below.

- 1. The structure of lesbian self-realization stories
- 2. The case of "generic" you
- 3. Computer-mediated discussion groups as communities of practice
- 4. Critical discourse analysis of the treatment of Monica Lewinsky in the Clinton-Lewinsky scandal
- 5. Socio-political motivations for code-switching in Israel
- 6. Language socialization in Italian-speaking children
- 7. News media racial profiling
- The discourse marker o sea in spoken Mexican Spanish 8.
- 9. The function of silence as a discourse feature in direct and crossexaminations in a criminal trial
- 10. Pragmatic shift in apologies in Chinese
- 11. Been and beyond: tense/aspect marking in North Alabama English
- 12. The sign language interpreter's role in turn-taking and simultaneous talk in non-face-to-face interpreted interactions
- 13. The use of the past tense verb form for the past participle in NYC English
- 14. The use of narrative to mark group membership and construct identity on myspace.com
- 15. Usage patterns of thanks and thank you in American English families
- 16. The effectiveness of mass notification text messages
- 17. Study of Hindi-English code-switching and identity in Hindi movies
- 18. A study of the discourse marker ai in spoken Brazilian Portuguese
- 19. Code-switching by English/Turkish bilingual children
- 20. Ebonics and American public schools

Application - The Alice F. Freed Prize in Language, Discourse and Society

Deadline for Application: No later than April 1 of the academic year of graduation. Students need to submit this completed application to the Linguistics Department. 222 Schmitt Hall. Montclair, NJ 07043. Phone: 973-655-4286

Student's Name:
Address:		-
City:	State	Zip
Student's ID #:	Expected Date of	of Graduation
Telephone #:	Email address:
1. APLN 605 Researc	h Questions in Applied Linguistics	:
Topic:
Option A or Option B	? Advisor:
2. APLN 502 Socioling	guistics:
When taken?	Taught by?	Grade received?
3. Elective from the li	st above: Course taken? APLN
When taken?	Taught by?	Grade received?
	(This is your GPA for MA co
requirements for the Ma	ease confirm by signing that you will he had a hin Applied Linguistics by the end of date is permissible when the final 1 slot the spring term.)	May of the current academic year
Student's Signature		Date
Nominating faculty memb	er (Optional)
Signature of Linguistics Department Administrator		Date application was submitted
A copy of this dated appli	cation is to be provided to the student.	