(“The Katyn Massacre. Refutation of the ‘official’ version: new findings at the site of a German mass murder site in Ukraine (translated from French”)

This book introduces the reader to the evidence that Joseph Stalin and the Soviet leadership did not shoot tens of thousands of Polish prisoners of war in April-May 1940 - an event known in history as "The Katyn Massacre".

In April-June 1943, Nazi troops unearthed several thousand Polish officer corps in the western part of the USSR. The Nazis claim that the Soviets executed these officers in 1940. Version immediately accepted by the Polish government in exile in London, fanatically anti-communist.

The Soviet government cries out for Nazi propaganda. "Katyn" becomes the password of cold war policy. Anti-Communists and Trotskyists accuse the Soviets of having executed the Poles; the USSR and the Communists everywhere else make the Nazis responsible.

After 1989-1991, the Soviet government of Mikhail Gorbachev proclaimed that Stalin did indeed execute the Poles. In 1992, Russian President Boris Yeltsin handed the Poles documents of the famous "closed file No. 1" as evidence of Soviet guilt in Katyn. Since 1995, many Russian historians have claimed that these documents were fake, intended to denigrate the Soviet Communist Party and Stalin in general. While the anticommunists (and the Trotskyists) accepted them as irrefutable "proof".

In 2011, Polish and Ukrainian archaeologists investigated the mass graves of Volodymyr-Volynskyi (Ukraine), which contained victims of the Nazis, as well as the badges of two Polish policemen who were thought to be "victims of Katyn". More than 96% of the bullet casings found are of German origin and date back to 1941.

This discovery dismantles - and absolutely invalidates - the "official" version of the "Katyn massacre". This "official version" ca not be true. This book is an objective, scientific presentation and an account of the evidence on this historically and politically important topic.
