ANNUAL REPORT
GENDER, SEXUALITY, AND WOMEN’S STUDIES

Departmental Summary

The Gender, Sexuality, and Women’s Studies program at Montclair State is an interdisciplinary undergraduate program with a rich and varied history and significant growth potential. The program’s potential hinges at a moment of enormous national uncertainty around the progress and rights of women and other (all) marginalized people, and the past year has seen an increase on campus in student activism and eagerness around issues related to gender and sexuality studies. The program offers a BA degree (GSWS) as well as two minors (LGBTQ Studies and WMGS), all of which engage opportunities for interdisciplinary study and a high degree of student choice. Among program course offerings, three courses fulfill general education requirements, and numerous offerings are cross-listed or share seats (co-sits) with other departments to foster cross-disciplinary collaborations for both faculty and students. The program is also linked to student life organizations and activities, including CAPS (Counseling and Psychological Services), the Office of Social Justice and Diversity, the LGBTQ Center, the Women’s Center, and more.

Program Governance
Faculty elected Jessica Restaino into the role of Director of the GSWS program midway through AY 18 and while she was completing the last semester of her term as Director of First-Year Writing. In September 2018 Dr. Restaino was able to focus exclusively on a three-year leadership term for GSWS, work for which she receives three credits of reassigned time per semester. The program’s administrative structure additionally includes a faculty coordinator for the LGBTQ+ minor, a program assistant whose time is also shared with three other programs, and two undergraduate work study students. The Director receives input and guidance from an elected Steering Committee of faculty, which meets once per month during the semester, and also relies on a faculty Advisory Board that votes on pertinent issues and advises the Director as appropriate. The Advisory Board is constituted each September by open call from among faculty and staff with a relationship to the program as specified in the bylaws; the Director holds one Advisory Board meeting each semester and routinely updates the AB via email regarding program news. Program bylaws, which were revised and approved by the Advisory Board in Fall 18, offer procedural guidelines for the work and administration of the program. An outline of program leadership is below.

STUDENT NUMBERS

Course Enrollments
Enrollment records (culled through NEST) indicate GSWS (which includes GLQS courses) is a small program with promising interdisciplinary breadth as well as a stable presence in the general education curriculum. The program served well over 600 students in AY 19 (638) and engaged faculty from numerous departments across CHSS (College of Humanities and Social Services) and CEHS (College of Education and Human Services), as well as key Professional Staff (Educational Opportunity Fund). AY 20 promises still-wider faculty involvement, with a new elective course offered through CART (College of the Arts) and deepening collaborations with Professional Staff through the Office of Social Justice and Diversity.

Below please find tables that summarize students served across courses and sections. Please note that GSWS 102 (‘Introduction to GSWS’), GLQS 100 (‘Introduction to GLQS’), and GSWS 200 (‘Transnational Feminism’) all fulfill general education requirements. The remaining courses serve majors, minors, and other interested students. In a number of cases (noted with an *) seats are shared with other departments (see below tables for details).

Total AY 19 Enrollments: 146

*GSWS 302 was run multiply as a co-sit (seat sharing) with Religious Studies, Latino and Latin American Studies, and Gay, Lesbian, and Queer (GLQS) Studies; GSWS 355 is cross-listed with Justice Studies; GSWS 403 is cross-listed with Justice Studies; and GSWS 350 is cross-listed with Public and Professional Writing (WRIT). In each case additional seats were reserved for (and occupied by) students registering under those alpha codes.

*GLQS 302 was run as a co-sit with Religious Studies and Gender, Sexuality, and Writing Studies.

FA 19 Course Enrollment Snapshots:
The introductory, general education level is a critical site for recruitment of new students into the major and minors, and it is imperative that these courses run as close to at cap by September for maximum recruitment opportunity. See below for a screenshot (3 June 2019) of current enrollments in our two introductory level courses (GLQS 100; GSWS 102):
Majors and Minors
Building a solid base of majors is of fundamental, urgent necessity for this program. The minors—WMGS and GLQS (or LGBTQ+)—are also of critical importance, with our LGBTQ+ Studies minor lagging after the departure (about two years ago) of Brian Edwards, an influential and active LGBTQ Center/OSJD Director who also taught as an adjunct in the program. Dr. Restaino continues to work on building a relationship with student life staff, including the new Director of the OSJD, Hamal Strayhorn, and the new Asst. Director, Ebony Jackson, in order to foster recruitment into the academic program among students invested in student life/activist activities around gender/sexuality. Restaino and Strayhorn have collaborated on a number of projects already, and she has agreed to serve on the planning committee for the annual Social Justice Conference hosted by the OSJD. Ebony Jackson has agreed to teach a section of GSWS 102 and has helped with course advertising. These collaborations will continue to be essential. Outreach to students enrolled in introductory level courses is also key and will be described later in this report.

Major Count (Report run by Jessica Brandt, CHSS Dean’s Office, June 2019):

Minors:
39 (14, GLQS; 25, GSWS/WMGS)

Note: A March 2019 report had the program @ 27 majors and 33 minors which indicates an 18% increase in majors and 15.4% increase in minors in the last two months.

Growth and Recruitment
In her presentation to the faculty Steering Committee on April 17, 2019, Dr. Restaino noted that by that date in the SP 19 semester the program added majors/minors as follows:
   GSWS Majors = 6
   GSWS Minors = 6
   GLQS Minors = 2

Current numbers are impacted by the flow of graduating students, as well as incoming freshmen and transfers. The director is funded for some administrative work through July and August and will review the final count as we head into FA 19 with hopes of a comparative percentage increase from FA 18 across the major and minors.

CURRICULAR ISSUES AND INNOVATIONS
Under the leadership of the program director and with advisement from the former GSWS director and current CHSS undergraduate curriculum committee chair (Julie Farnum), the faculty advisory board voted to approve a series of minor revisions to the major with the goal of increasing student recruitment across all courses, the major, and our two minors.

A summary of the alternations—which have been approved at the CHSS Curriculum Committee level and which will be considered by the University Undergraduate Curriculum Committee in September—are summarized below. These alterations, when approved, will take effect formally in September 2020.
Alterations

1) Revise the title of the required category, “Professional Development” to “Professional Development and Advanced Study.”
   Rationale: This revised title more accurately reflects our goals for undergraduate majors, which include both preparation for professional, workplace environments and further academic work (for example, pursuing a graduate degree in the discipline).

2) Remove ENTR 201 from the options students have to meet the “Professional Development” (now proposed to be “Professional Development and Advanced Study”) requirement for the major.
   Rationale: Faculty have determined that this course does not guarantee the degree of substantial focus on issues related to gender and sexuality that we prioritize for our majors.

3) Remove PSYC 294 from the options students have to meet the “Professional Development” (now proposed to be “Professional Development and Advanced Study”) requirement for the major.
   Rationale: Faculty have determined that this course does not guarantee the degree of substantial focus on issues related to gender and sexuality that we prioritize for our majors.

4) Add GSWS 302 to the options students have to meet the “Professional Development” (now proposed to be “Professional Development and Advanced Study”) requirement for the major.
   Rationale: Faculty have determined that this course, which focuses on selected topics relevant to the study of gender and sexuality, appropriately meets the needs of our GSWS majors.

EXPANSION OF GRADUATE/INTERDISCIPLINARY/CERTIFICATE PROGRAMS

While the program needs critical and focused energy on existing undergraduate courses, student advisees, and engaged faculty, interdisciplinary collaboration is key to the cultivation of double majors, connecting our minors to major discipline areas across the University, and also encouraging faculty to think about course design in ways that loop our program and our students in more broadly (and more creatively).

To that end, there are two expansion areas for SP 20 that will engage students and faculty new to our program and that will hopefully lead to further collaborations around degree programs:

1) Art and Design, Nicole Archer (Asst. Professor), “Bad Moves: Gender and the Moving Image,” This course has recently been approved the Department of Art and Design and will be accepted as an elective option for GSWS students.

2) GLQS 201, “Queer Identities,” a required course for the GLQS minor and GSWS major, will be taught by Dr. Brad Van Eden Moorefield, a faculty member in the Family Science department (CEHS) and will count as fulfilling a requirement for the Family Science major. Dr. Van Eden Moorefield’s research is on queer families.

Gifts/Donations to the Department, Faculty or Students
The program has had two donations of books or magazines of value in AY 19, and has established a “giving” button with a direct foundation account via the program’s website. These steps are efforts to build towards sustainable relationships with community members and alumni who want to support our program and our students. Below is a brief outline of these steps:

1. The program now has an established foundation account where donations will feed directly. A “button” is available on our website to support and encourage giving:

   !Donate

   Donate to Gender, Sexuality, and Women's Studies

   As a small but growing program, we are dedicated to our mission of grooming the next generation of feminist scholars and activists working to make our workplaces more just and equitable, and engendering global cultures of care and concern for the environment and for each other no matter our gender, sexual orientation, creed, race, class or ethnicity.

   Make a Gift

Donors

2. Faith Frankel: Ms. Frankel donated three vintage Ms. Magazines and—a career professional writer—wrote a piece to be featured on our program website, “Feminism at 80” (forthcoming FA 19). The program director hosted Ms. Frankel on campus and had her visit her class as a thank you for her generosity. Ms. Frankel is not a graduate of Montclair State.

3. Hilary Shank-Kuhl: Ms. Shank-Kuhl is a Montclair resident who made a donation of many vintage and canonical books and magazines. Ms. Shank-Kuhl is a visual artist (painter) and Dr. Restaino visited her at her home to retrieve the books and also to learn more about Ms. Shank-Kuhl’s interests. She is not a graduate of Montclair State.

FACULTY ACHIEVEMENTS
As our tenure-line faculty are housed in departments outside of GSWS, their scholarly achievements are listed on their respective departmental reports. Below please find a listing of faculty who have taught in our program and/or served on our advisory or steering committee in AY 19. Faculty biographies are available through our department website and listings of accomplishments are accessible through home departmental reports.

A copy of the GSWS Director’s CV is attached in the Appendix of this report. Dr. Restaino was just recently

STUDENT ACHIEVEMENTS

Awards and Scholarships

1. Edna and Ben Gould Memorial Scholarship: The program awards one student with this gift of $250 as per the criteria outlined by donors. GSWS major Victoria Santiago was the recipient of this award in AY 19.
2) School of Business Pitch Contest: GSWS major Lisa Noesi (Class of 2020) was the $50,000 winner for her product, “Mavo Care.” Noesi will be featured on the GSWS program website in September 2019 and has agreed to participate in a panel discussion about women in business.

3) Internships: The program has partnered two students with unpaid internship opportunities with Planned Parenthood of Metropolitan NJ to support development, marketing, and social media work. Initiatives to build internship opportunities in credit-bearing projects will continue in AY 20.

Graduating Seniors
In AY 19 the GSWS program graduated X seniors, Y with BA degrees and Z with minors. At this time the program director has opened a Google document to collect students’ contact information as well as updates on job, internship, and graduate school placements. This information will be stored and used for further outreach, and the selected alumni will be featured on the program website to encourage networking and fundraising.

COMMUNITY ENGAGEMENT
With the help of undergraduate work study students, each month the GSWS program collects, organizes, and advertises gender/sexuality-relevant events across campus to students on our two email lists (all students enrolled in GSWS or GLQS courses; majors and minors) as well as to our faculty across departments. In certain cases the program co-sponsors or even hosts these events, and in other cases we merely help to advertise. A short listing of co-hosted events is below. One of the most successful events of AY 19 was the GSWS program Open House (program fliers in Appendix). This event brought well over a hundred students, many enrolled in our introductory classes, to hear a panel featuring recent graduates across a range of interests and experiences.

Fundamental to fuller community involvement, the program updated its website—with the help of both the Meaghan Morin in the CHSS Dean’s Office and GSWS Program Asst. Tamicha Adams—to a new design in Word Press. While we continue to add more sophisticated features (including a “Student Spotlight” button that will be ready to go for FA 19), the bulk of the work was completed during AY 19. Additionally, the program has a social media presence on Snap Chat, Facebook, Twitter, and Instagram. Undergraduate student workers regularly update the Facebook and Instagram accounts with news of events, class registration options, and most recently student features.

While this report does not offer a comprehensive summary of GSWS-related off-campus activities among our faculty (home department reports should offer a fuller view), GSWS Director Jessica Restaino continues to serve as a board trustee for Planned Parenthood of Metropolitan NJ (the affiliate has one of its five health centers in Montclair). This relationship has helped open increased awareness and opportunities for students around Planned Parenthood activism and resources. A representative from Planned Parenthood Action visited campus and set up a table in University Hall to answer questions and distribute materials. In April 2019 four students traveled to a free summit at Princeton University for students interested in organizing a PP Action chapter on campus. Finally, the Montclair Art Museum invited Dr. Restaino to offer an “introduction to gender and sexuality studies” workshop for its docents to help them in discussing art in the museum that takes these concepts as a focus.

Looking ahead to AY 20, Dr. Restaino has plans to partner with GSWS Alumnus Evan Weisberg around a GSWS Stewardship Program. The vision for this initiative is to host small, informal, student-led conversations in non-academic spaces around campus where students can discuss issues related to gender and sexuality and, ultimately, learn more about the GSWS program and how/why academic study of these issues is important. Weisberg is currently a graduate student at Montclair State, pursuing a master’s degree in Higher Education, and is eager to help coordinate some of this effort as part of his ongoing professional and academic development. Plans to kickoff this program in FA 19 are underway.
