Protecting Human Rights, Human Dignity, & the Environment

75 Years of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights

Join the New Jersey chapter of Human Rights Educators USA and Montclair State University for a special commemoration of the 75th anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR) - a milestone achievement of collective, global commitment to human dignity.

This human rights education workshop is for K-12 teachers and anyone dedicated to social justice & environmental education.

We will investigate the relationship between human rights and the environment—because “everyone has the right to life, liberty, and security of person,” yet for many people these core principles are under threat due to global warming and environmental racism.

How can educators support human rights? How can we draw on current scholarship to teach about the vital importance of protecting the environment and taking positive steps to ensure social justice for marginalized communities facing threats of increasing air temperatures, rising sea levels, and more frequent wildfires and catastrophic weather events?

Free and open to the public, K-12 educators will receive professional development hours.
