

Education

2009 MFA, Studio Arts. University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Massachusetts.

2005 BFA., Illustration; BA, Spanish. California State University, Long Beach, California.

Teaching Experience

2020-21 Color and Light. Adjunct Instructor. Montclair State University. Montclair, New Jersey.

This studio course is a comprehensive introduction to color theories, practices, and vocabulary, providing a knowledge base and a variety of experiences in color mixing applicable to design, art and fashion. Combining elements of Albers, Itten, and other color theorists, along with contemporary advances in physics, biology, and computer imaging students learn about the psychological and narrative aspects of color in addition to being introduced to contemporary color specification systems, and some color chemistry. Various free or paid digital tools (Adobe, Krita, Blender) are used as well as gouache paints and collage. Historical and contemporary examples are presented in weekly digital slide presentations. Taught in-person and online.

2020 Time. Adjunct Instructor. Montclair State University. Montclair, New Jersey.

A foundation class focusing on time based projects, primarily using Adobe Premiere as a video editing platform. Students cover the basics of picture taking, animation, short films, foley, and performance art to investigate concepts of change, sequencing, transformation, duration and narrative.

2019-21 Perceptual Drawing. Adjunct Instructor. Montclair State University. Montclair, New Jersey.

A foundation class focusing which introduces students to drawing concepts. With an emphasis on observational drawing, various materials, methods and subjects are explored as a means of cultivating visual acuity. Skills and exercises include: perspective, figuration, still life and landscape. Historical and contemporary examples are presented in weekly digital slide presentations. Taught in-person and online 2019 Space. Adjunct Instructor. Montclair State University. Montclair, New Jersey.

A foundation class focusing on making three dimensional projects, using hand and power tools as well as 3D printing. Using basic sculptural processes, this studio course develops the student's understanding of form and space. Exploration in three-dimensions includes proportion, scale, form, materiality, surface, volume and relationship. Collaborative and individual projects will relate to the human form, functional objects and the environment with emphasis on communication, sustainability, and cultural context. Projects include research, mapping, planning, design, building and presentation as integral components. Historical and contemporary examples are presented in weekly digital slide presentations.

2016 Intro. to Drawing. Adjunct Instructor. Marymount Manhattan College. New York, New York.

For non-art majors to develop their knowledge, perception and technical facility in drawing through a variety of media. Students explore both traditional and unconventional concepts for creating successful drawings and will articulate their knowledge of the fundamental principles of drawing and of aesthetic literacy.

2014 Portfolio and Presentation. Visiting Instructor. Korea National University of Art. Seoul, Korea.

Graduate and undergraduate critique-based classes focusing on professional statements and presentations for the thesis exhibitions of students in the painting department.

2013 Senior Thesis. Adjunct Instructor. Maryland Institute College of Art. Baltimore, Maryland.

A six unit critique-based class preparing painting department seniors for their thesis exhibitions. Work is independent, either at home or in a designated studio. Progress is evaluated by at least three individual critiques with a participating instructor, a final critique with a visiting artist, and a midterm review by a panel of the program's instructors.

2011-13 Painting level II. Color, Pigment, Surface. Adjunct Instructor. Maryland Institute College of Art. Baltimore, Maryland.

A structured, observation-based class focused on skill building and preparing students for subsequent independent research. With a continued emphasis on process, students explore a range of materials and techniques, gaining a deeper understanding of the tools of painting, color mixing, pigments, varied surfaces, supports and substrates, and the technical challenges of painting in oil. Through projects such as still life, landscape, the figure, abstraction and conceptual concerns, students develop personal approaches that enhance their formal and individual growth as artists.

2013 Art. Teacher. Princeton Institute of Mathematics and Science. Princeton, New Jersey.

Assignments incorporated science and technology within a context of art history. Projects were also coordinated amongst other classes, such as bookmaking with the English class.
